Day 1

Thursday 23rd January

The tour started with an overnight flight from London Heathrow to Bogota

Day 2

Friday 24th January

Fly to Cali; Cali Country Club; La Lolita

In the early morning our overnight flight arrived at Bogota International Airport, where we connected with an internal flight to Cali. Once at Cali we met Alejandro and boarded our vehicle. We drove through the Cauca valley and experiencing the first sightings of numerous birds as we enjoyed the countryside.

Our first stop was the lovely Cali Country Club where birds were everywhere. Whilst enjoying breakfast we could see big groups of Bare-faced Ibis, Cocoi Herons, Neotropic Cormorants and other more common waterbirds. Then we had a nice stroll and kept on finding more attractive species with our first encounter with the endemic Greyish Piculet, flocks of Blue-crowned Parrots, Southern Lapwing and both Spot-breasted and Red-crowned Woodpeckers.

Later we transferred to our lodge for the night. The gardens were great for birding and, after lunch, we saw lots of hummingbirds including Green Hermit, White-necked Jacobin, Crowned Woodnymph and Andean Emerald. We also saw other charismatic species such as Acorn Woodpecker, the endemic Colombian Chachalaca, and the gaudy Inca Jay. It had been a great day to begin a very rewarding trip in the country with the most birds in the world!

Day 3

Saturday 25th January

Queremal Road

We had an early start and headed to a low pass over the western Andes before continuing down to the Pacific foothills to explore the Queremal-Anchicaya road. Our first stop was to see a female Lyre-tailed Nightjar at its nest, incubating a very young fluffy chick! Next was a wonderful stop for a typical breakfast with birds coming to the feeders. We enjoyed close views of Chestnut-headed Oropendola, Glistening-green Tanager and many others. Before continuing we saw many more birds including a family group of stunning Toucan Barbets which were colourful as well as having good calls!

We spent the rest of the day exploring the more forested areas closer to the foothills and had a packed lunch. At the lunch site we found a Colombian endemic outside its usual range - Greyish Piculet at 400 metres above sea level on the Pacific slope! Another noteworthy bird of the day was Spot-crowned Barbet.

Day 4

Sunday 26th January

Km18; Sonso

We started with breakfast and birding at La Lolita where the best birds were Crimson-rumped Toucanet, Andean Motmot, Inca Jay, Acorn Woodpecker and Colombian Chachalaca. We then packed our bags and moved on. We stopped at the legendary important bird area of Km18 where we birded along the San Lorenzo ridge finding Golden-crowned Flycatcher, a co-operative pair of the usually elusive Azara's Spinetail, and a flock of Tanagers with Metallic-green and Beryl-spangled as the dominant species.

Further on we arrived at Finca Alejandria and became tantalised with the hectic activity at both the hummingbird and banana feeders. It was all happening before us, and then we discovered a family of the endemic Multicolored Tanager! First we saw a female, then two young, and after a few more minutes, a male in full glory! Also in the area were Saffron-crowned, Golden, Scrub, and Hepatic Tanagers as well as a pair of stunning Red-headed Barbets. Hummingbirds were active and included Long-tailed Sylph (subspecies emma is a potential future split to Green-tailed Sylph), the localised Blue-headed Sapphire, lots of Andean Emeralds, and many others. We then did a walk with further birding and returned to eat Argentinean-style asado (grilled meats) which was just as good as the birding.

In the afternoon we drove to Buga on the back roads and enjoyed the countryside scenery. We stopped at Sonso lagoon. It had rained so we couldn't access it but the road to the main entry provided some good birding. We had telescope views of Common Potoo and saw lots of Bare-faced Ibis, a single Glossy Ibis, several nice Limpkins, an Osprey soared and a Dwarf Cuckoo was enjoyed through the telescope. Nearby a Grey-necked Wood Rail called but didn't show, however an obliging Jet Antbird did a great show as it posed and sang for us. Finally we proceeded to our comfortable hotel in Buga for a nice dinner and a good rest.

Day 5

Monday 27th January

Buga to Montezuma

We had a very civilised and plentiful breakfast at the hotel and enjoyed common birds coming to the side of the pool, adding Yellow-crowned Amazon and Cattle Tyrant to our list before leaving. We drove north and then headed west, passing the coffee-planted slopes around Apia before reaching Pueblo Rico, where we changed to our 4x4 vehicles to do the last leg to Montezuma, where the staff were expecting us with a delicious lunch. Lunch was packed with birding as there were both banana and sugar-water feeders in front the open dining area. We had close up views of our firsts choco endemic hummingbirds such as Violet-tailed Sylph, Empress Brilliant and the ever-so enchanting Velvet-purple Coronet. At the bananas were Black-winged and Buff-throated Saltators, the stunning Crimson-backed Tanager and some old friends like Scrub, Palm, Blue-grey, Lemon-rumped and Silver-throated Tanagers.

After lunch we were shown to our rooms. After a rest we set out on an afternoon session nearby. As we started the birding seemed quiet, but later we started to get some good birds such as the choco endemic Black Solitaire, Colombian endemic Black-and-gold Tanager, and nearby on one of the creeks we had a very showy family group of yet another endemic, the Crested Ant Tanager! Nearby, coming to eat at our feet, was a confiding Olive Finch. Although the afternoon seem slow to start with, it ended being very productive in terms of specialties.

After returning to the lodge we had a shower, worked on the bird log and soon were on our beds, dreaming of all the good birds!

Day 6

Tuesday 28th January

Montezuma Road

We started early with a coffee before departing to the highest parts of the birdy Montezuma Road. We made a stop before breakfast as we heard one of our targets, the Colombian endemic Chestnut-bellied Flowerpiercer. Soon we were enjoying telescope views of a bird singing happily. In the meanwhile Leo (our local guide) set hummingbird feeders at the edge of forest. We had an al fresco breakfast and then set off to find our other target species which we found with ease as it came singing at very close range; the sonorous Munchique Wood Wren. We then spend the morning doing roadside birding, finding a few birds at the time. Suddenly a nice flock came at eye level and we watched a great number of the special ones from the area such as Lacrimose Mountain Tanager, Purplish-mantled Tanager, Grass-green Tanager, a family of Sharpe's Wren, Dusky Bush Finch, Yellow-vented Woodpecker, the hard to find Tanager Finch (a pair was nicely photographed!), Black-throated Tody-Tyrant, Green-and-black Fruiteater and the gaudy Golden-fronted Whitestart, to name the most exciting. We then continue the birding and admired the number of orchids and flowering plants until we were met with our lunch.

Lunch was served in the company of hummingbirds that attended the feeders, and we enjoyed both, having excellent views of Greenish Puffleg, Velvet-purple Coronet, Empress Brilliant, Collared Inca, White-tailed Hillstar, Violet-tailed Sylph, and nearby came both White-sided and Bluish Flowerpiercers.

Little was happening after lunch so we headed down some more and luckily, on one of the bends, we came across a pair of Chestnut-breasted Chlorophonia collecting nest material. Then rain started and we looked for shelter. We then return to our base and enjoyed a nice cosy dinner and a great night's sleep!

Day 7

Wednesday 29th January

Montezuma to Otun

This morning we enjoyed watching birds coming to the gardens and feeders, and having our last look at some of the chocó endemics such as Empress Brilliant, Velvet-purple Coronet and the scarce White-tailed Hillstar. Other birds around breakfast were Red-headed Barbet, Slaty Spinetail, Ornate Flycatcher, Sooty-headed Wren, Blue-naped Chlorophonia and Fawn-breasted Tanager. We then set off towards Otun. On the way we added the neotropical boreal migrant, Broad-winged Hawk. We reached Otún-Quimbaya, our base for the night, and had time to settle in before getting ready for another birding session.

In the afternoon we had a very rewarding walk in the grounds where we had the pleasure of finding the two most important targets of the Otún valley; the endemic Cauca Guan and the enchanting Red-ruffed Fruitcrow! Both the Guan and the Fruitcrow were encountered in good numbers and we even found a Cecropia tree laden with so much fruit that both birds could be seen at the same tree and in the same field of view of our optics! Next we saw a puppy Crab-eating Fox, sunbathing in the fields close to our cabins, which allowed for great pictures as well!

Day 8

Thursday 30th January

Otun to Rio Blanco

We left very early in the morning to be on time for the feeding of the Antpittas at what is the Colombian epicentre of this gaudy family of birds. Having arrived in time, we were soon enjoying a well-deserved breakfast and the first feeding station. A few seconds after arriving, two obliging Chestnut-crowned Antpittas awaited us at the trail head. We watched from the road as they took turns in devouring the earthworms. They were very confiding and hungry! A stop at a second feeding station produced, after a much longer waiting period, a superb Bicolored Antpitta. Thumbs up and we continued to a new feeding area for the miniature Slate-crowned Antpitta and the trick worked again, however the endemic Brown-bellied Antpitta was nowhere to be found. We change position to the previous feeder and after some waiting, we finally enjoyed great views of this tricky one. There was a shower mid-late morning but we still managed some birding, adding Masked Trogon, Grass-green Tanager, Pearled Treerunner and a few more.

At lunchtime we enjoyed a feeding station with many hummingbirds including the smart White-bellied Woodstar, Tourmaline Sunangel, Long-tailed Sylph and Speckled Hummingbird (with no specks in this subspecies). After another nice lunch with a typical soup to keep us warm, we enjoyed more hummingbirds and the banana feeder which luckily attracted Andean gems such as Buff-breasted Mountain Tanager, Slaty Finch and Blue-capped Tanager.

Day 9

Friday 31st January

Nevado del Ruiz

Another early start had us waking up the staff at the usual place we go for breakfast. While they arranged everything we had a stroll as the fog was lifting to allow the first light. Our main target here was the endemic Rufous-fronted Parakeet. We heard it and saw glimpses as it disappeared in the fog! Meanwhile a stunning Purple-backed Thornbill was found, and an odd lost Great Blue Heron was recorded at what is probably the highest altitude ever at 4000 metres above sea level!

We had breakfast and then resumed birding lower down where we could actually see! We managed to find Andean Teal and Andean Ruddy Duck and had good views in the telescope. Up again to try one more time found us, after some patience, finding a group of 14 parakeets that left their roost and flew in a circle as the skies opened. We could see them well and enjoyed their rich lemon green colouration. Then it was time to go higher, up to the paramo and all the way to the entrance of the national park to search for the other target endemic of the day: Buffy Helmetcrest. Soon after arrival we found a gorgeous male feeding and perched. We all had prolonged views, allowing observations of the feeding behaviour on the famous Espeletia plants.

It was still a bit windy so we headed down lower where, after several stops, we saw nice Stout-billed Cinclodes, Andean Tit-Spinetail, White-chinned Thistletail and a male Paramo Seedeater. As we moved on, a surprise came when we spotted a group of Rufous-fronted Parakeets feeding on a shrub by the side of the road. They gave the best ever views of this rarely seen (especially in this condition) species, which allowed us good photographic opportunities.

Lunch awaited yet lower down, with a few hummingbirds buzzing around! We placed our order and then walked in the beautiful gardens and enjoyed a frenzy of spectacular high Andes hummingbirds with such special creatures as Sword-billed Hummingbird, Black-thighed and Golden-breasted Pufflegs, Viridian and Tyrian Metaltails, the superb Rainbow-bearded Thornbill, Shinning Sunbeam and Buff-winged Starfrontlet. We then had a great lunch with wonderful scenery and surrounded by hot springs.

After lunch we enjoyed more hummingbirds before continuing to bird lower down, where we found a nice flock that included a pair of ever so active Golden-fronted Whitestarts, White-throated Tyrannulet and Pale-naped Brush Finch. A surprise was Andean Pygmy Owl perched nearby and we enjoyed telescope views. Lower down again an Ocellated Tapaculo called, but it wasn't willing to show, so we decided that as the light dropped, we had better return to the hotel for another fine dinner.

Day 10

Saturday 1st February

Manizales; Camedguadua Marshes; Pereira Airport

We had a lie-in followed by a very enjoyable buffet breakfast, and soon we were birding again! In the extensive grounds we had more prolonged views of a number of species we had encountered before such as Black-capped Tanager, Yellow-bellied Siskin, Cattle Tyrant and Southern Lapwing to name a few. Afterwards we walked to the hummingbird feeders and encountered a nice mixed flock containing new ones such as Oleaginous and Black-eared Hemispingus, and some old friends like White-naped Brush Finch, Blackburnian Warbler, Slate-throated Whitestart and to our surprise, two showy Plushcaps which allowed great views as they moved in the bamboo understorey. The Hummingbird feeders were filled for the day, allowing nice views of Bronzy Inca, Green and Sparkling Violetears and the fine Steely-vented Hummingbird.

Having had time to finish the last of our packing, we set off on the short drive to the famous Camedguadua marshes. As soon as we started birding a Sooty-headed Tyrannulet greeted us, together with a very active Greyish Piculet that allowed great views. We continue birding and found the place to be packed with waterbirds, with a flock of over-wintering Blue-winged Teal, Little Blue Heron, and Snowy and Great Egrets. Some elegant-looking Black-necked Stilts decorated the close edges, and American Coot, Purple Gallinule and Pied-billed Grebes were all happy in the sun. We then walked a section with scrub nearby and soon were enjoying a pair of nice Bar-crested Antshrikes, with Ruddy-breasted Seedeaters and a striking Vermillion Flycatcher among the most notable sightings.

Lunch time came and we only had to drive a short distance to enjoy a nice meal. We soon returned to the marshes to do our final checklist. Ice creams were enjoyed to celebrate another fine holiday with Naturetrek, while Osprey soared nearby. A final short walk produced a trio of exciting birds: the elegant Pied Water Tyrant, a solitary Wattled Jacana and two Blackish Rails!

A short drive then took us to Pereira airport where we said our thanks and goodbyes to Alejandro before starting our journey back to the UK via Bogota.
