Day 1

Wednesday 17th January

I met the group at 6 o'clock at the Charles Darwin Hostel and that was the beginning of our amazing week of birding. Roderic and Rachel had already been in Quito for a few days so they were showing us the Quito birds along the way to Yanacocha. Our expectations were the hummingbirds and we were very pleased to see 12 species until we left the place, the most exciting ones were Sword bill and Rainbow bearded Thornbill. We were accompanied by Scarlet-bellied and Black-chested Mountain Tanagers whilst walking. Afterwards we had lunch in a very cloudy and foggy car park.

In the afternoon we started on our way to Maquipucuna and we did several stops along the way. Just to mention some good sightings: 2 Ecuadorian Rails sticking their heads out into the marsh near Nono, some Rufous-chested Tanagers nearby. The birding was getting very exciting around 3.30pm but we were still far from reaching the lodge so we had to keep moving. The idea was to stop in the fish farm but the rain was very bad so we kept going, picking up some birds along the way like Green Kingfisher and Pacific Hornero. We arrived at the lodge at around 6pm.

Day 2

Thursday 18th January

We had breakfast around 6am and the birding started from the dining room of the lodge with Black Phoebes, Golden-crowned Flycatcher and House Wren. Near the lodge there was a tree full of tanagers, with a beautiful display of colours, including Swallow, Silver-throated, Bay-headed, Golden and Lemon-rumped. Also present were Thick-billed Euphonia, Buff-throated Saltator and of course the Bananaquit. We started to walk up the main trail with beautiful birding weather. Until I went back to find one of the tapes I forgot, the group already found Scale-crested Pygmy Tyrant thanks to Chris for his great identification skills.

The birding went on well for the whole morning with the most exciting time when we saw a lot of Toucan Barbets and Uniform Antshrike, also the quite elusive Scaled Fruiteater. Even harder to find with its all green colour and brown bill, was the Crimson-rumped Toucanet, spotted by Rachel's sharp eyes. After all the excitement we went to have lunch to get some energy to keep going in the afternoon.

By group agreement we left at 2.30pm straight after lunch and we walked along the road out of the Reserve in the direction of Santa Lucia, looking for any birds that we hadn't seen in the morning. We had to work very hard to get to see two very shy birds, and our endeavours were rewarded with great sightings of White-whiskered Puffbird through the scope and most of us managed to see Spotted Nightingale Thrush, what a beauty!

Higher up along the road some of the other Tanagers were showing off beautifully, Black-capped, Blue-necked, Metallic Green and a big group of Swallow again. The rain started quite early but just before that we managed to see Scaly-throated Foliage Gleaner, a big group of Barred Parakeets in flight, Ornate and Rusty-margined Flycatcher. We had to give up as the rain was too hard and so headed back to the lodge. Some lucky guys saw Green-fronted Lancebill from the bridge. To finish the day a Common Potoo came to sit on top of the antenna when we were having our beers, in such heavy rain!

Day 3

Friday 19th January

We left Maquipucuna after breakfast with the final destination of that day being El Mirador del Rio Blanco. Before we left we managed to pick up some nice birds like Choco Toucan and Pale-mandibled Aracari. As it was good weather on the way out we were able to stop at the fish farm, as we hadn't been able to do it on the way in. From there we saw Barred Hawk soaring around, Green and Ringed Kingfishers, Ecuadorian Thrush and different kinds of Seedeaters.

In our minds we were determined to get to Sachatamia to see the Hummingbirds and when we got there it was the most fantastic display of colours, so stunning to see all the Hummingbirds, in particular the Choco endemics such as Empress Brilliant, Velvet purple Coronet, Purple-bibbed Whitetip, Brown Inca and many others. All of this was accompanied with delicious tropical juices and coffee. We left there ready to have lunch in the Mirador Lodge but just when we sat down for lunch Orange-bellied Euphonia came to the window getting very confused by its own reflection.

After lunch and checking in we left to make some phonecalls in the nearby town for those who wanted to communicate home. Thereafter we kept birding, our idea being to go to Milpe and when we arrived there it was raining cats and dogs! We had to make a decision to drive 40 minutes lower down called Silanche, a great decision as the weather was much better for birding. Lineated and Black-cheeked Woodpeckers were on a dead tree and in the same tree there were Pacific Parrotlets nesting, all of us managed to see them. We kept driving along the road and we saw Yellow-tufted Dacnis, what a combination of colours of the male, black, turquoise and yellow. To finish the day we saw Plain and Streaked Xenops. We came back to the lodge around 6.30 pm to have an early dinner so we could rest a bit before the early start planned for the next day.

Day 4

Saturday 20th January

This was to be our hardest day as we had a long journey ahead. Breakfast was at 4am and we departed with our final destination being Quito at the end of the day. On the way to Quito we stopped at La Paz de las Aves, a reserve where we hoped to find the main attraction of the trip, the famous Cock of the Rock. From where we left the car (at 5.30am) we walked half an hour to the Cock of the Rock Lek. There were not many of them but 5 were enough especially when they were very close to us in good light and a spectacular display. This was just the beginning of what was to be a fantastic day of birding.

Angel, the owner of this place, took us to an open place where we had great views of many birds, the most stunning ones were Orange-breasted Fruiteater, Red-headed Barbet, Crimson-mantled Woodpecker etc etc.

Afterwards he showed us 3 species of Antpittas (Yellow-breasted, Moustached and Ocre-bellied). The first two were fed with worms so they came very close and some people managed to take good pictures of them.

We were going back to the house they have for coffee, but Angel's brother called us over as he found Dark-backed Wood Quail and they were stunning. After all these thrilling birds we were ready for coffee and the traditional Bolon de verde (plantain with cheese in the middle).

We left around 10am and we went in the direction of Bellavista to look for some other target birds. We found several flocks on the way with Grass green Tanager, Dusky bush Tanager, and Green and black Fruiteater. The main attractions were Plate-billed Mountain Toucan, Powerful Woodpecker at lunchtime and Golden-headed Quetzal. We left this place in the direction of Quito but before reaching the city we did a last stop and saw the very rare White-tailed Shrike Tyrant along with Golden-rumped Euphonia and Sparkling Violet Eared. We arrived to Quito around 6.30pm in preparation for the highlands the next day.

Sunday 21st January

We left Quito very early again, very much prepared for the Highland birding, heavy coats, gloves etc. Our first stop was 45 minutes away from Quito and there we managed to see nice birds, Tropical Mockingbird was exciting, followed by Vermillion Flycatcher and some others. Our second stop at a place called Casa Vieja (old house) with no house actually (!) was where the serious birding started. Shiny Sunbeam and Giant Hummingbird were present, followed by Streak-throated Bush Tyrant, Tawny Antpitta and Red-crested Cottinga, and this was just the beginning. On the way back to get the vehicle John spotted a couple of Andean Condors, we had stunning views of the Condors flying and landing on the big cliffs several times. We suspected they were trying to build a nest as they were male and female.

After all this emotion, we kept going up to look for the Seedsnipe and thank goodness we were lucky. We tried for them very hard at the beginning with freezing cold weather, which is only my opinion as for British people it was fine! We saw 2 of them in flight nearby and I thought that was it, but I decided to be brave and walk down further and we found the same birds walking on the ground, very close, so we really enjoyed watching them. I have to say we saw all the targets there including Ecuadorian Hillstar, Blue-mantled Thornbill, Many-striped Canastero and all the other Furnariids.

The altitude was a little bit tough for some people so we drove down to have our lunch. Just below the pass is the place where we all sat and had a good box lunch and I heard the Red-rumped Bush Tyrant, that was so nice, he was nearby and came straight in when I played a tape so we had great views of it. After lunch we had a prize, Giant Conebills flying into our binoculars, what a view!

The weather started to get a little drizzly and it was already 2.30pm and we had a long way to go to San Isidro lodge. Along the way we managed to see good birds and we arrived to the lodge at 5.30pm. Again ready for beers, but before that everyone managed to see new hummingbirds there, like Bronzy Inca and Long-tailed Sylph.

Everybody was having dinner when I got out to look for the famous San Isidro Owl, luckily he was sitting on a Cecropia tree and we managed to see him incredibly well. That was the end to an amazing day.

Monday 22nd January

Breakfast started as early as usual and we had the morning in San Isidro before going back to Guango Lodge. We did most of our birding around the lodge for the first two hours, fantastic views of Black-billed Peppershrike, Subtropical Cacique, Andean Solitaire and many others. We saw so many birds until the man arrived to take us to see the Antpittas, White-bellied was well observed, Chestnut-crowned didn't appear, but it really didn't matter as we had already seen it that morning.

After all of this we went along the road going in the direction of the Research Station and we saw brilliant birds there, like Southern Lapwing, Common Snipe, both unusual to see there. I got very excited about the Common Snipe in particular, but no-one else was that enthusiastic! We returned for a delicious lunch, put our bags in the car and drove to Guango Lodge.

Along the main road we managed to see the highlight of the day, two Black and Chestnut Eagles displaying. In the afternoon we arrived at Guango Lodge and obviously there were more Hummingbirds to look for, here we saw some new ones like Tourmaline Sunangel, White-bellied Woodstar and Chestnut-breasted Coronet.

Tuesday 23rd January

Today we were aiming for the birds that we hadn't seen yet and again we were lucky, especially when we saw a family of Plushcaps, Dusky Pyha and the beautiful Grey-breasted Mountain Toucan. There was a lot of activity in the morning so we managed to see a lot of the birds that we were looking for, like Black-capped and Black-eared Hemispingus, Pale-naped and Slaty Brush Finches.

We had lunch at 12.30 and the idea was to start the return to Quito to look for any other Highland birds we hadn't previously seen. Near the Papallacta Lake we managed to see the Rufous Antpitta, Andean Teal and Yellow-billed Pintail. Our last stop on the way back to Quito was at a lake which is 200 metres away from the main road, so we puffed our way along with the altitude and through the scope we all saw Andean Ruddy Duck, Andean Coot. Reuben and Chris saw the Silvery Grebe as they stayed on behind the rest. This was our last day of birding and we got back to the Charles Darwin Hostel in Quito at 7pm.

Comments

I have to say that I really enjoyed this trip, all the people got on so well and everyone was so helpful to each other. It was a brilliant group and everyone was very easy to work with. I had to recognise that the birding was stunning and everything worked as we planned and I hope that everybody enjoyed the tour as much as I did. Food, accommodation and transport worked really well and people in all the lodges were very friendly, and Milton our driver also did a great job.

To finish, we are going to attach the checklist of the birds we saw. Enjoy!
